An open letter to the million-dollar PC war room from the Alberta Liberals

Edmonton – Dear Hal, Mark, Mike, Tom, Paul, Ron and the rest of the PC war room frat boys:

Here's some free advice.

If you're going to issue an attack release accusing the Alberta Liberals of shipping bitumen out of the province for processing, you should make sure that your own government didn't allow bitumen to be shipped out of the province 72 hours earlier.

Or at the very least, make sure the decision wasn't reported on the front page of the Calgary Herald 24 hours earlier.

"Tory leader panned over pipeline; more bitumen headed to the U.S.:

Hinton -- Conservative Leader Ed Stelmach was criticized Saturday for failing to stem the flow of bitumen to the United States after regulatory approval was given to a pipeline project that will ship the product south.

The National Energy Board's approval late Friday of the $3-billion Alberta Clipper pipeline will initially see up to 450,000 barrels of bitumen per day shipped to Wisconsin when it becomes operational in mid-2010, with the potential to reach 800,000 barrels per day.

The pipeline is one of several projects announced or approved in the past year that will see bitumen upgraded or refined in the United States, sending potentially billions of investment dollars and thousands of value-added jobs down the pipeline...." (Calgary Herald, February 25, 2008)

Nice work, fellas. Keep trying.

Yours truly,
The Alberta Liberals

PS: Good luck blowing your war chest.
